The Ministerial Committee on lerusalem, headed by Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, is today expected to approve the construction of an estimated 2,600 units in the Har Homa neighborhood in southeastern. Jerusalem; and grant permits for 3,500 units for Arabs in 10 existing neighborhoods.

Netanyahu appealed Palestinians yesterday not to resort to violence in reaction to the decision. Whoever wants the peace process to continue will understand that violence will achieve nothing," he said.

However, Palestinians spoke angrily yesterday, "We are telling them [Israel]: You are playing with fire," Paisal Husseini, the leading Palestinian official in Jerusalem, said, There will be an explosion."

While Israel has passed messages to the Palestinian Authority about its plans for Har Homa, Netanyahu does uot want to do anything which would be perceived as "asking for permission" to build there. As for other preparations for today's decision, Netanyahu. has been briefed by General Security Service head Ami Ayalon on potential fallout.

Ayalon has warned in cabinet meetings that violence couldfollow a decision to build in Har Homa. Sources say security. officials have notified Netanyahu in advance about likely "problematic elements" who will seek to incite the Palestinian street in response to the decision. After appearing before the Knesset Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, Netanyahu told reporters that Jerusalem Mayor Enud Olmert would present the committee today with the plans.

"I advise everybody to cool the thetoric and keep level heads, the premier-said. We are planning on building in communities, throughout lerusalem, including the Arab communities. Therefore I think this entire rhetorical escalation is unfounded, as I would think that the attempts to forment vio-lence would the misplaced because it could torpedo the entire peace process. The responsibility of leaders is to cool passions, not to inflame Netanyahu noted the housing shortage in Jerusalem. "Young people are leaving Jerusalem because they have no place to go [here] and this is true also of the Arabs and the Jews. What I intend to do is to change that, and build for both Arabs and Jews. I think this will ameliorate the situation. It's good for

He said the decision to go ahead with the project would be taken after consulting the security establishment.

According to an official briefing, Netanyahu raised the matter of Har Homa during his talks with Jordan's King Hussein on Sunday and during his recent trip to Washington, but stressed he had not asked for US permission to build in · Netanyahu told the MKs that the Palestinians and whole world understand that since the change in government there has been a change in Israel's approach regarding Jerusalem and that Israel would refuse to return to the 1967 borders or agree to a Palestinian state.

Committee chairman Uzi Landau said in response: "Eveu in this room there are those who doubt that - including me."

During the meeting, Meretz leader Yossi Sarid warned that the project would end up sparking a round of violence like that which followed the opening of the tunnel exit. National Religious Party faction head Hanan Porat accused Sarid of "inciting the Arabs."

Members of the Democratic Arab Party and the parliameutary caucus for east Jerusalem are scheduled to meet today in the Knesset with Husseini, who holds the PA's Jerusalem portfolio, and the PA's Ziad Abu Zayyad to discuss Israel's settlement policy and ways of preventing the project.

MK Taleb a-Sanaa (DAP), who initiated the meeting, said building on Har Homa would "cause the peace process to blow up and set off a new cycle of bloodshed and a new intifada." He said the prime minister would bear the full responsibility "for the results of this absurd decision." In New York, the United Nations Security Council expressed concern yesterday over Israel's policies in east Jerusalem and urged restraint so as not to undo the Middle East peace process, council president Njuguna Mahugu of Kenya

"I was requested to invite the permanent representative of Israel to convey this concern and solicit his views on how Israel intends to proceed," he added.

There are hirts that Israel has tentatively approached the US and inquired if the US would veto a Security Council resolution if the issue is brought to a vote in the Security Council.

Har Homa IDF kills 1 in Hizmeh clash

By ARIEH O'SULLIVAN and MARGOT DUDKEVITCH

The security forces are bracing for Palestinian violence in the West Bank and Gaza Strip following last night's clashes in the village of Hizmeh, where IDF soldiers reportedly disguised as Arabs killed one man and wounded three during an apparent abortive arrest raid.

The IDF rushed a large number of forces to the village, about a kilometer north of Jerusalem's Pisgar Ze'ev neighborhood, following the shooting. But news of the death sparked even more rioting by stone-throwing Palestinians, Troops responded with rubber bullets, tear gas and shock grenades.

The army declared the region a closed military zone, banning entry by either Israelis or Palestinians and by late last night the tensions had subsided. Settlers have frequently complained of stone-throwing from

Last night's clashes come at an already tense time in the territories in response to the plans to launch construction of the Har Homa neighborhood in Jerusalem. Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu is expected to announce the beginning of the project today, a step some security sources said could togger

The situation is so precarious that Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai instructed OC Southern Command Maj-Gen. Shlomo Yanai, OC Central Command Maj-Gen. Uzi Dayan and the newly appointed coordinator of activities in the territories, Maj.-Gen. Ya'acov Or, to inform their respective. Palestinian Authority counterparts that the shooting was by soldiers and not Jewish settlers, and that the the incident Mordechai also instructed the generals to update the Palestinians on the results of the inquiry.

Chief of Staff Lt.-Gen. Amnon Lipkin-Shahak said last night that there will be no changes in the IDF presence in the territories. "I hope and believe there will be uo change," Israel Radio quoted him as saying.

IDF soldiers and border policemen are to deploy today at Har Homa to quell any unrest.

Yesterday's incident began at around 5 p.m., when residents detected soldiers from the elite Duvdevan unit moving around the outskirts of the village. Some witnesses said the soldiers were dressed in civilian clothes, while others said they were uniforms and tried to arrest someone. Palestinians explained that they thought the soldiers were settlers.

They were there on operational duty," said Maj.-Gen. Gabi Ophir, commander of IDF forces in the West Bank, "We do not know the exact number of shooters who actually entered the city ... This is a speeial unit. We do not know if the guy they went after is a fugitive or not." At one point, villagers started stoning the soldiers and, according to the IDF, the soldiers, - believed to have been no more than three opened fire when they found themselves in a life-threatening situation. Initial reports said the shooting the army quickly acknowledged that it was soldiers that had opened fire and 100 Palestinian Authority offieials were informed of this.

Another witness told television reporters that three men dressed in civilian clothes who spoke Hebrew and Arabic entered a house in the village and forced a man at gunpoint to go with them.

"They took the man behind the

"When we arrived we saw a man lying on the main road surrounded by IDF troops and there was also an Arab ambulance," he said, adding that Ibn Halawi had no pulse. "The only wound we found was a gunshot wound in the knee," he said. The villagers carried the mortally wounded man to the IDF roadblock for evacuation. According to some witnesses, border policemen refused to intervene.

Hadassah Hospital spokesman Yossi Shuval said Ibn Halawi was dead on arrival. The only wound we could see was a gunshot in the back of his knee, which is hard to believe was the cause of his death," Shuval said. He said only an autopsy could determine the cause of death, but that one could only be done with the family's approval.

Ali Mothick, 44, was taken to Mokassed Hospital in eastern Jerusalem suffering from a gunshot wound in the left leg. He was later discharged, said a hospital nurse.

Two other Hizmeh residents were transferred to Ramallah Hospital. According to a doctor at the hospital, Abir Mohammed Abdel Aziz, 18, suffered from shock, and her husband, Hamze Naif Mubarak, 19, had a fractured left elbow.

Speaking at the IDF roadblock in Hizmeh the Palestinian Authority is responsible for civil affairs, but Israel is ultimately responsible for security. The IDF inquiry will try to determine whether the soldiers were justified in opening fire.

Preventive Security chief Jibril Rajoub was brought to the area and briefed on the incident. Palestinian police helped to restore quiet.

"It's shocking. What happened is a black mark and a shame for the Israeli government and for Israel," Rajoub said. Palestinians have reported army raids on villages outside Jerusalem in recent weeks in a bid to find residents with Jerusalem ID cards, which are then confiscated. Jon Immanuel contributed to this

Bar association head criticizes Justice Barak, Avi-Yitzhak

Supreme Court Chief Justice Aharon Barak got drawn further into the Bar-On affair yesterday wheo the head of the Israel Bar Association lashed out at him for "intervening" in the appointment of the attorney-general.

Barak was questioned by police Monday about what he knew regarding the appointment. Before the cabinet voted on Roni Bar-On's appointment on January 10, Justice Minister Tzahi Haneghi said he had consulted Barak about

That Barak discussed the matter with Haneghi elicited the wrath of bar association head Drdr Hoter-Yishai.

"According to the accepted division of power, the head of the Supreme Court is obliged to refrain from intervening in matters concerning the executive branch," Hoter-Yishai told reporters yesterday. "This is an unacceptable norm."

The involvement, Hoter-Yishai said, "led to a grave problem: The [court] president was obliged to give testimony in the affair. As a result, the Supreme Court and its president will find themselves in difficulties if they have to deal with

According to Channel 1, Hanegbi told Barak about Bar-On's appointment "as a matter of form." Barak even went so far as to tell Bar-On, at a later stage, that he, Barak, didnot believe Bar-On was suitable for the post, the report

Hoter-Yishai also charged attorney Dan Avi-Yitzhak with "what appears to be unethical behavior" for releasing to the media the text of his letter of resignation as legal counsel for MK Aryeh Deri. The letter, made public last Wednesday, was reportedly the subject of numerous complaints from lawyers throughout the country.

For three hours yesterday, the bar association's central committee and ethics committee discussed the issue. The ethics committee stresses the importance of maintaining professional privacy as a basic principle in the rela-donship between lawyer and client," committee chairman Matti Atzmon said later. He said that lawyers had to uphold this right "fearlessly and unamhiguously."

Avi-Yitzhak will have a fortnight to send a "statutory reply" to the charges of violating professional ethics, Hoterhim before a disciplinary court. Such a court could merely reprimand him or could revoke his license to practice law. Responding sharply to Hoter-Yishai's remarks, Avi-

Yitzhak, in a statement, noted that since Hoter-Yishai had connections with many of the people involved in the affair and was himself questioned on the matter by police, "he should refraio from commenting on the case and from dealing with it in any way."

He added that the Bar-On affair had nothing to do with the professional services he provided to Deri and were thus outside the realm of the lawyer-client relationship. He noted size the realm of the lawyer-cirent relationship. He noted that Deri himself said that the principle of professional confidentiality did not apply to the matter, and that a court had also ruled to this effect.

"My only involvement in the matter was the result of my close association with the prime minister," he said.

Those who charged him with violating his client's right to privacy had themselves violated his right to privacy by publicizing the discussion of the ethics committee. Avi-Yitzhak

The end of a beautiful friendship?

By MICHAL YUDELMAN

The friendship and political partnership between Instice Minister Tzahi Haneghi and Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu go a long way back. The two met some 10 years ago, when Netanyahu was Israel's UN ambassador, and grew closer wheo Netanyahu returned to Israel to run for the 1988 Likud Hanegbi's loyalty paid off. When Netanyahu became prime minister he appointed Hanegbi health minister. Soon after-

Hanegbi: I won't be made the scapegoat

Justice Minister Tzahi Haneghi, one of key players in the Bar-On affair, has made it ahundantly clear that he has no intention of going "gentle into that good [political] night." This despite hints from the Prime Minister's Office that they believe this to be Haneghi's new role.

Hanegbi was quoted yesterday as saying he will not be the "Bar-On scapegoat," and that Prime Minister Netanyahu was more involved in the Bar-On appointment than he was.

The main questions involving Hanegbi are wbether Bar-On was foisted oo him hy the Prime Minister's Office, or whether he first vetted the idea. The police are also investigating whether he knew of a "conspiracy" to appoint Bar-On.

Haneghi, who has traveled a long, loyal road with Netanyahu, has been questioned twice hy police, both times under caution, meaning he is suspected of having committed a crime and what he says may be used against him. Haneghi has, at least publicly, given two different accounts of where the Bar-On idea came

In an affidavit presented to the High Court of Justice regarding the appointment, Hanegbi wrote: "On December 1, 1996, the autorney-general [Michael Ben-Yair] told me of his intention to resign on January 1.

A number of days later the prime minister told me to recommend someone appropriate for the job. During the month of December I spent much time weighing the difAround January I, I told the prime minister that I formulated my recommendation, and that the candidate was Roni Bar-On. A oumber of days latter the prime minister told me that this was acceptable to him, and that if circumstances would allow it, he would raise the issue the next day in the cabinet meeting."

But on January 23, the day after Ayala Hasson broke the story, Hanegbi said: "When the name of Bar-On was given to me by the Prime Minister's Office, from a list of names, I am the one who thought that Bar-On would make a good candidate. The prime minister was impressed by him, but despite that - decided on Dan Avi-Yitzhak, for reasons not having to do with this case."

Regardless of who first raised Bar-On as a candidate, Haneghi was the point man at the cabinet meeting on January 10 when the appointment was approved. Netanyahu's lawyer, Ya'acov Weinroth, has said that Haneghi led him to believe that the appointment had the blessing of Supreme court Justice Aharon Barak, and that once Netanyahu heard that, he agreed to the appointment.

Some cahinet ministers, foreamong Communications Minister Limor Livnat, also understood from the way Hanegbi presented the issue in the cabinet that Barak had indeed agreed to the appointment. Barak, who was questioned by police yesterday, reportedly said that he was opposed to Bar-On

Deri at center of storm, again

The allegations that there was a Yitzhak is appointed, "you will ouspiracy to appoint a "pliable" have to deal with me." conspiracy to appoint a "pliable" attorney-general shocked much of the country. But it's unlikely many people were surprised to hear that Aryeh Deri was somehow linked to the matter.

Deri, the one-time political wunderkind, has for the last decade been close to the center of most political storms, but this time he is the eye of the tornado.

If the allegations are true, then Deri was approached a few months ago hy Likud activist David Appel with a deal to push for the appointment of an attorney-general who, Israel Television reported Appel as saying, "will be ours." That candi-date was Roni Bar-On. Appel has since sued ITV for libel.

According to allegations, Deri then met Bar-On and - in exchange for his help in getting Bar-On appointed - Bar-On would agree to a plea bargain in his hribery case, making it possible for Deri to return to the cabinet.

According to this scenario, Haneghi theo received a list of possible candidates from the Prime Minister's Office and Bar-On's name was on the list.

In the meantime, the story goes, Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu had another favorite for the attorney-general's job: Dan Avi-Yitzhak, Deri's lead lawyer in his bribery trial. Deri was alleged-ly infuriated by this, either because he didn't want to lose his lawyer, or because he was afraid Avi-Yitzhak would not be able to strike a plea bargain with him.

Deri, by his own admission, then told Avigdor Lieberman, director-general of the Prime Minister's Office, that if Avi-

Sur Bahir was under Jordanian rute until 1967, and placed within the new Israeli borders of Jerusalem after 1967. Beit Sahur and Bethlchem, 5 km to the south of Sur Babir, remained in the West Bank and are now in Area A, under the full control of the Palestinian Authority.

Har Homa is designed to preempt the final borders of Jerusalem, and therefore violates the Oslo Accords. Israel claims it is making no changes to Jerusalem's status, since the horders were fixed long before the peace process began.

The animosity toward the Har Homa project, which would increase Jerusalem's, Jewish population by some 25,000, is aggravated by the Palestinian perception that Israel is seeking to reduce the Arah population of the city by taking away the Jerusalem ID cards of any Palestinian who has acquired foreign citizenship or who has moved outside the Jerusalem Mnnicipality.

Jihad rejects invite to Palestinian strategy parley

Less than one day after Mahmoud Ahbas, the deputy of Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat, accused "Islamic elements connected to Iran" of planning an assassination attempt against him, Islamic Jihad formally rejected an invitation to a national dialogue on the future of Palestinian strategy in the peace

The talks which were scheduled for later this week had been accepted by all opposition groups, including Hamas. groups, including Hamas. However Islamic Jihad, the most pro-Iranian of local Islamic groups, said in a leaflet to international news agencies that it could not participate since the condition for doing so was ending

"armed struggle" against Israel. However, this is not the understanding of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine which plans to attend the dialogue conference, but still rejects the Oslo accords and formally adberes to the right to use violence against Israel.

While in Ahu Dhahi, Abhas told international news agencies on Monday that three men were arrested for planning to kill him a week ago in the West Bank. One agency said the plan included an attack on Arafat as well. PA police have refused to comment on Ahhas's charge and have said they do not know of such an assassination plan, although the three men may be held hy one security arm without the knowledge of others.

Islamic Jihad's rejection of dialogue is likely connected with the accusations levelled by Oslo accords architect Ahbas, since whether the charges are true or not, they indicate new friction between the PA and at least one Islamic group. Hamas, some 10 times larger than Islamic Jihad, has agreed to participate in the dialogue without accepting the

Murder forces postponement of court case

Monday's apparent murder of Ya'acov Kahalon, one of three suspects in the attempted murder of Ze'ev Rosenstein, has forced the postponement of testimony hy another suspect in the case. Tel Aviv District Court judges Devora Berliner, Sara Gadot and Zvi Gurfinkel decided to delay hearing testimony from Rafi Weizman due to the slaying. A third suspect in the case, Ilan Aslan, has been missing for some two months.

Weizman and the others are accused of trying to kill Rosenstein by firing 10 shots at him on Tel Aviv's Ibn Gvirol Street about a year ago while he was in his car, allegedly to avenge the murder of Ilan Aslan's brother in Fehruary, 1993.

MKs back Burg's joint panel on religious affairs

Members of the Knesset's Immigration and Absorption Committee yesterday expressed strong support for statements by Jewish Agency Chairman Avraham Burg on the need to refrain from any legislation altering the religious status quo or any change in the Law of Return.

According to a Jewish Agency spokesperson, the MKs also supported Burg's idea to set up a joint committee of Jewish Agency leaders representing Diaspora Jewry and Israeli political and social leaders to discuss Israeli-Diaspora relations and religious affairs. Burg called on the MKs to do everything possible to post-pone any vote on conversion legislation. Jerusalem Post Staff

Knesset panel delays decision on minimum sentence for sex crimes

By BATSHEVA TSUR

Despite heavy pressure from MKs and lobbyists, the Knesset Law Committee yesterday postponed a decision on the second reading of a bill which would set minimum sentences for sexual offenses

The bill, introduced by MKs Yael Dayan (Labor) and Dedi Zucker (Meretz), received the backing of Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahn and Justice Minister Tzahi Hanegbi, who both attended the committee

Despite the importance of the issue at hand, it was clearly the presence of Netanyahn and Hanegbi which made the meeting the Knesset's media attraction of that the other was responsible for the former. attorney-general's appointment - shook hands cordially. Then they sat down on either side of committee chairman Shaul Yahalom (NRP) and ignored each other.

When both had had their say to the committee, they left the room, refusing to comment to reporters about the affair.

"We have to thank the ministers for taking off time to come here when there are such stormy affairs going on," said Yahalom, who introduced the draft hill. The hill would obligate judges to impose a minimum sentence of one-quarter of the maximum sentence for the offense, he said.

But he pointed our that, if the Knesset passed the bill, it would become law only a year later when a committee examining the penal system has finished its deliberations. The draft hill does not include crimes. committed by minors, he noted.

Netanyahu requested that a clause be added to the draft, to cover violence in the family against children. The punishment for such a crime should be double that of an ordinary crime, Netanyahu proposed. The home is the child's refuge from the world outside," he said. "It is preposterous when the child's protector turns into his attacker." Hanegbi praised the various factions in the Knesset for getting together on such an

Dayan pointed out that various lobbyists had helped to bring the bill to the public's attention after an earlier attempt by MK Ephraim Sueh, in the previous Knesset, had failed to garner government support.

While most committee members expressed support for the proposed bill, Tel Aviv District Court Judge Annon Strashnov pointed out that the legal system was opposed to the introduction of a minimum sentence. He noted that there were different degrees of severity involved in a crime and that it was impossible to tie the judges' hands. There is nothing wrong with the existing legislation, Strashnov said, noting that many judges had passed severe sentences for sexual offen

Representatives of the Women's Network pointed to a recent survey of court rulings on sentences for criminal offenses, prese ed to Chief Justice Aharon Barak. According to the survey, carried out between 1988 and 1993, the average sentence for a sexual offense was only 15 percent of the maximum punishment meted out by the law. The committee plans to continue its discussion ou the draft in the near future.

Mordechai: US should join Israeli-Turkish maneuvers

By ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

Israel is interested in including the United States in joint air and naval exercises between the IDF and the Turkish Army, Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai told. visiting Turkish Chief of Staff Gen_Ismail Karadayi yesterday.

Karadayi appeared to be open to the idea, and told Mordechai that there were many areas where cooperation between the defense establishments could be improved, in a sign that the Turkish military is been on enhancing ties with Israel despite opposition from Islamist Prime Minister Necmettin Erbakan.

"I can promise you that cooperation between Israel and Turkey in general and in security areas in particular will continue at all times and with the full might in the best of interests of both countries," Mordechai said following their Mordechai also told Karadayi that the cooperative relations between Israel and Turkey are contributing to the stability of the Middle East and preventing extremists states from changing the face of the region. Regarding the joint naval and air exercises both countries have agreed to, Mordechai said he would like to include the US Sixth Fleet because "American participation like this will greatly enhance the security of the two states and of the entire region." Israel considers Karadayi's visit an important sign that the military alliance signed last year with Turkey is on stable ground.

Mordechai said both countries were continuing to hold strategic dialogue, and wants to strengthen the links between the two countries' delense industries. Karadayi is to visit the Armored Corps: Memorial in Latrun and Israel Aircraft Industries today.

Report of Algerian massacre -18 dead

By RACHED KHEARI

ALGIERS (AP) - Dozens of Moslem militants set up a fake military checkpoint, then shot and hacked to death 18 people in the mountains of northwestern Algeria, a newspaper reported yesterday.

The slayings, which took place overnight Sunday, lasted over a five-hour period at the checkpoint set up near the town of Saida, 400 km. southwest of Algiers, the independent daily El Khabar.

Witnesses who returned to Algiers said they saw about 60 well-armed militants at the checkpoint, blocking the road with two heavy trucks.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility, but suspicion fell on the Armed Islamic Group, Known by its initials GIA, the group has set up fake checkpoints in the past to kill young military conscripts.

Of the 18 victims, 17 were less than 25 years old, the newspaper said. The government, which has downplayed Moslem militant violence, did not report the massacre. The attack was among the latest in a five-year-old Moslem insurgency. More than 60,000 people have died since the militarybacked government canceled January 1992 parliamentary runoffs the Islamic Salvation Front was expected to win on voter anger with corruption and high unemployment.

The Front sought to establish a government based on Islamic law. On Monday, a home-made bomb exploded in a crowded marketplace south of the Algerian capital, killing one persoo and leaving at least 20 injured in the stampede that followed, witnesses said. No one claimed responsibility for the attack at Boufarik, 40 km. south of Algiers.

Meanwhile, media reports said Monday that 18 other civilians had been killed by armed groups in the same general region since last Thursday. The reports blamed Moslem militants for the deaths.

The GIA, one of the two most powerful armed groups backing the Islamic fundamentalist's fight against the Algerian government, renewed its call to violence on Monday.

In a statement issued to the London-based independent Arabic language El Hayar newspaper, the group said it would "continue to wage its battle against the Algerian government." A wave of massacres and car bombings killed more than 350 people during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan,

Iraq says it fired 93 missiles in 1991 Gulf War

BAGHDAD (Reuter) - Iraq has said for the first ome that it fired 93 long-range missiles against Israel and multinational troops in Saudi Arabia during the 1991 Gulf War.

"Commander of the Iraqi ground-to-ground missile unit, Lieutenant-General Hazim Abdulrazaq Ayaubi, confirmed that the number of Iraqi missiles fired during Um al-Ma'rek [Iraq's name for the Gulf War] was 93," the official Qadissiya newspa-

China honors Deng, bombs rock western city

BEIJING (Reuter) - Deng Xiaoping's heir, President Jiang Zemin, hailed the late strongman in a funeral oration yesterday and said the future lay in the capitalist-style reforms of the revolutionary who transformed China.

But signs of cracks in the unity that Jiang presented as Deng's legacy appeared within hours of his final memorial rites when bombs rocked the western city of Urumqi.

Around 60 casualoes and at least one death were reported in two almost simultaneous bomb blasts that hit the mainly Moslem city, capital of restive Xinjiang region yesterday evening, officials said. One bus was destroyed.

As final rites began for Deng, who died last Wednesday at age 92, sirens and whistles wailed nationwide for three minutes to lameot the man who delivered unprecedented prosperity to the world's most populous nation while keeping communists in charge.

In Beijing's cavernous Great Hall of the People, 10,000 of China's cline Mao-suited revolutionaries mingled with Western-suited technocrats to bow before Deng's ashes. They heard Jiang, Deng's protege and now China's most powerful man, sob theatrically at the start of a 50-minute eulogy.

"The people of China love Comrade Deng

Xiaoping, thank Comrade Deng Xiaoping, mourn for Comrade Deng Xiaoping, and cherish the memory of Comrade Deng Xiaoping," Jiang said.

In a simple ceremony in line with Deng's wishes, Jiang reaffirmed Deng's distinctive formula of economic reform mixed with socialism, saying: "Reform is the inevitable road through which China will be able to achieve socialist modernization." On the stage beneath a black-framed portrait of a smiling, avuncular Deng lay a casket containing his ashes, draped with a red hammer-and-sickle communist flag, surrounded by flowers,

The test of Har Homa

t today's special ministerial meeting on Jerusalem, the government is expected to announce the building of 2,600 housing units in a new Jewisb neighborhood on Har Homa, and 3,500 units for Arabs in 10 Arab neighborhoods in the capital. The government is right to closely link the provision of Jewish and Arab bousing in Jerusalem, in an arrangement that takes into account Palestinian sensitivities

The Har Homa project is part of a larger municipal plan to build 20,000 units in Jewish neighborhoods and 8,500 units in Arab neighborhoods - in rough proportion to the city's current population balance.

Approval of building in the Arab sector is long overdue, because very little housing has been approved for Arabs in Jerusalem over the years. Though it is understandable that officials want to maintain the current demographic balance. Jerusalem's Arab sector must also be given room for natural growth.

The potentially significant policy change in favor of Arab building in Jerusalem, has not yet received any positive response from Palestinian leaders. More typical is Friday's statement by the Palestinian Authority cabinet: "The Palestinian leadership is very worried by the explosive situation in the City of Jerusalem after the latest Israeli claims, which are designed to isolate the city and Al Aksa Mosque from the rest of the West Bank.

This statement is farfetched, to say the least. It was a lie when Palestinian leaders claimed that the opening of a new exit to the Western Wall tunnel undermined the Al Aksa mosque. It is just as outrageous - and as dangerous - to claim that the Har Homa project bas anything to do with Al Aksa or any other holy place. The Har Homa project does not isolate anything; it is slated for a barren hilltop a good distance away from any major road, let alone the Al Aksa mosque.

It is one thing for Palestinians to oppose a step they believe to be against their interests; quite another to wildly distort the facts to maximize the emotional response. It is not so much the lie itself that is disturbing as the objective behind it To incite, rather than diffuse, a conflict with Israel over building in Jerusalem.

Nor is the incitement-through-distortion technique limited to the religious front. Palestinian leaders are also claiming that the Har Homa project is a "blatant violation" of the Oslo ularly since Jerusalem is specifically excluded Accords, because it changes the status of Jerusalem, which is a "final-status" issue.

This is a clear misreading of the agreement. While the Oslo agreement does prohibit either side from changing the status of the territories in Israeli actions.

dispute, this clause clearly refers to legal status. The clause is meant to prohibit Israel from annexing territory and the Palestinians from declaring a state - not to prohibit either side from building housing.

If anything, it is the Palestinians who are violating the agreements by attempting to intervene in Jerusalem, which, under Article XVII of the Oslo 2 pact, is explicitly excluded from the jurisdiction of the Palestinian Authority. This violation pales, however, in comparison to the violation of Oslo that the Palestinians are threatening to carry out. A violent response to an Israeli action that they oppose.

The Palestinian commitment to eschew violence is not just a matter of adhering to the plain meaning of every agreement reached with Israel since the bistoric handshake on the White House lawn in September 1993. It is the heart of the moral and psychological bargain with the people of Israel. Nothing could be more fundamental to the survival of the peace process than upbolding the principle of the peaceful resolution of disputes. The peace process is a two-way street. Israel cannot be expected to continue to take the concrete, risky, and painful steps of banding over territory to a Palestinian entity, if the Palestinians are not willing or able to do the only thing that is expected of them: Reject violence.

Since the Hebron deal, rejecting violence is not only a matter of abiding by the Oslo agreements, but of honoring a solemn commitment to the United States.

President Bill Clinton and his peace team should not wait for violence to occur in this case, but should roove to prevent it. This can be done by pointing out that the Har Homa project, however inadvisable from a US perspective, is not a violation of the Oslo Accords. The US should make clear that a violent Palestinian response would be a very serious violation of Oslo, and the Palestinian Authority would be beld responsible for it.

Some Palestinians have claimed that Israel's decision regarding the Har Homa project is a test of Israel's seriousness about peace. It is true that, in the post-Oslo era, Israel should take Palestinian concerns into consideration, even when it is not specifically required to do so by the agreement.

Israel, however, cannot be expected to severely limit its sovereignty in its own capital, particfrom Palestinian jurisdiction under the Oslo Accords. The real test is whether the Palestinians can stay within the accords' boundaries in expressing their opposition to legitimate

Har Homa is too late

With the prime minister's announcement that the Har Homa project will now receive government approval, the affair seems to be unfolding like a Greek tragedy in which the fate of the participants is not only sealed, but foreseen.

Thus, with awful inevitability, Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert announced from the US last week that he is not interested in any local or international ramifications, only in getting the project approved.

He knows that Faisal Husseini. who calls this "a declaration of war by Israel," sees an explosion imminent should Israel persist with such policies in Jerusalem.

Regarding Binyamin's Netanyahu's stated intention to Binyamin's permit Arab building within the municipal borders as a quid pro quo for Har Homa, expert on Jerusalem Meron Benvenisti commented yesterday that "as with similar promises in the past, nothing will result."

In Brussels this week, Yasser Arafat made it crystal-clear that Har Homa could endanger the whole peace process; in this conviction he has the backing of the entire Arab world.

On the Israeli side, Jerusalem Police Chief Aryeh Amit has warned that building would be "an extreme act, likely to incite the Palestinian masses." Internal Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani added that it "could lead to serious disturbances among the General Security Service head Ami Ayalon was more ambiguous, but noted that "the situation could get out of control because of pressure on Arafat from the street.

The way in which the Palestinians see Har Homa was well put by Husseini. "In war," he said, "each side can take any action it wants, according to its own considerations. But we are in a peace process, and we are meant to act according to concepts appropriate to a peace agreement. In peacetime, decisions must be taken with the agreement of both parties.

"If the Israelis persist in taking unilateral decisions, this is a sign that they are thinking in terms of war, not peace."

Jerusalem Labor MK Ofir Pines even saw Netanyahu's hesitant stand over Har Homa as "evidence that he has lost his self-confidence concerning government policy on Jerusalem." Over Har Homa, says MK Dalia Itzik, "We must hit Bibi as hard as we can. call him a liar, and say that he is dividing Jerusalem."

With the Labor opposition trying to out-flank Netanyahu on the right, what will their platform be when they find themselves fighting an election?

JERUSALEM may be the boly city, but there is nothing sacred about Har Homa (Jabil Ghanien).

Israel has an interest in coexistence with the Palestinian population of Jerusalem - and, beyond question and rightly or wrongly. to them Har Homa is a provocation which can only lead to new bloodshed.

Are we not being irresponsible in pursuing our policy unilateral-ly, from the point of view both of our interests in Jerusalem and in

The alternative is not to concur with Arafat's every step, but to accept that both parties draw their own red lines which it is perilous to cross, and around which negotiations are imperative.

The new US secretary of state is warning against steps which would make peace efforts more difficult. The European Community agrees.

There is a difference between Har Homa and nearby Gilo, or Givat Ze'ev or Ramot, even if all the latter were built in spite of Palestinian protests on land expropriated from them in a Jerusalem whose "unification" was not recognized by the international community.

On formerly Palestinian land in East Jerusalem, 36,000 units were then built for Jews, while on other lands 600 units were built with government aid for Palestinians who constituted 28 percent of the population. The difference is that then there was no peace process; now there is one.

The Har Homa project is too late. It has missed the bus - and in any case the cost of the journey is now liable to be too high for any reasonable traveler.

Not for Natan Sharansky. For him, "regarding Jerusalem, any time is the right time, and no time is better than the present."

That should we make of the flap over a German newspaper calling Britain's foreign secretary. The Jew Rifkind",

The respected German Frankfurser Allgemeine Zeitung has refused to apologize for the epithet claiming no insult was intended.

Journalist Michaela Wiegel. reporting on a speech Malcolm Rifkind made last week, wrote: "As if not completely convinced by his own words, the Jew Rifkind concluded – ironically, apologetically – with a quote from Luther. delivered in German: 'Here I stand, I cannot do otherwise.

Former Conservative minister David Hunt, chairman of the British branch of the inter-parliamentary Council Against Antisemitism, was outraged by the FAZ labeling of Rifkind. Calling it reminiscent of "the lan-guage of Hitler," Hunt said he had written to the speaker of the German parliament.

But in Germany itself, Ignatz Bubis, leader of the Jewish community, who has never hesitated to criticize actions or remarks offensive to the community, said reaction to the epithet - which dominated British media over the weekend - was totally overblown. The context in which it appeared, he said, showed no insult was intended. Rifkind himself, meanwhile, has sought to downplay the wbole thing.

Well - is it an insult to be called "Jew?"

In the 19th century some prominent American Jews thought so. In its place they tried to popularize the name "Hebrew." which is the background against which the Reform Rabbinical Seminary was named Hebrew Union College, even in Jerusalem; and it also explains why the movement's organization of synagogues is called the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Yet if people do not object to being identified as Democrat or Republican, Labor or Tory, Christian or Moslem, doctor, lawyer or professor, why should they jump at being labeled "Jew"?

THERE are some grounds for discomfort

In Christian theology and the culture flowing from it, "Jew" is associated with Judas, betrayer of Christ. Both Jew and Judas come from Judah, one of the Tribes of Israel.

Since the 10 tribes were lost in the 7th century BCE, and the remaining Israelites came mainly from the tribe of Judah in the southern kingdom of Judea, it was only natural for the new Israelites of the Diaspora to be called Jews.

Dictionaries used to vie with each other over derogatory definitions under "Jew," though they are slowly cleaning up their act. But the 19g9 edition of the Oxford Dictionary still lists "Jew" as a verb meaning "to bargain excessively, to cheat, or behave in the manner of a usurer." And there's my old friend the Jewfish, which the 1988 Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary says is "any of various large groupers... usually dusky, green or blackish, thick-headed, and rough-scaled." Shakespeare's Sbylock and his pound of flesh have caused shudders in many generations of Jews, and the German classic Jew Seuss symbolizes the shady diplomatic maneuverer who pulls the strings of power behind the scenes. Was the reason David Ben-Gurion did not give the name Judea to the new Jewish state the negative Diaspora associations it evoked? In contrast, the name Israel shone out as a biblical symbol of triumph.

But we bave moved on almost 50 years. And it seems strange that with the State of Israel assumed to have given Jews back their lost dignity, the epithet "Jew" can still be felt as a put-down.

covered her Jewishness. She is now reportedly embarrassed by the possibility of naming too many lews to diplomatic and government posts. Is this a manifestation of that same uneasiness over being labeled "Jew"?

BANK WORKERS' STRIKE

Sir. - In your issue of February 14. you published an article entitled "Public opposes Friday bank clo-sure." As a veteran bank worker, I would like to assure you and your reading public that I am far from overpaid and work a ridiculous work week, due to the three late afternoon shifts that I am forced to work every week in addition to Fridays.

With the increasing sophistica-tion of the Israeli banking system, there is little practical justification to keep the branches open on Fridays as well as in the evenings. Since the national trend is to a fiveday week, the inability of a very small segment of the population to come in during the afternoon or evening shifts or to utilize the telephone services offered from 7 a.m. to midnight or to use an ATM machine ought not keep the rest of the country hostage. ### THE JUDAIZATION OF JERUSALEM

Sir. - Hanan Ashrawi, with her usual contempt for muth, has complained about what she called "the Judaization of Jerusalem." Now if we look at the Holy City from the prosaic statistical point of view, we note that Jews have been the majority in Jerusalem since 1870 (or as early as 1854 according to Karl Marx's estimate). Of course Jerusalem has worldwide significance for religion, civilization, and culture, and for their history. Here again, the city's meaning for the world, and for Christians and Moslems in particular, is rooted in Jewish history, religion and tradition.

So we see that the city is Jewish both in the majority of its population and in its meaning in world history. What Arab nationalists have been trying to do for most of the 20th century (with the help of influential Westerners) is to dejudaize Jerusalem Before World War I, Jews lived in various quarters of the Old City and in various

Old City, on David Street, the Street of the Chain, etc. However, during British rule in the 1920s and 1930s, Arab bigots succeeded in driving Jews out of all Old City quarters except the Jewish Quarter. Likewise, the series of pogroms under the British drove Jews out of several Jewish neighborhoods outside the walls, not to mention the Jews driven out of mixed neighborhoods. Acts of "ethnic cleansing" by Arabs also took place elsewhere in 67 Jews were massacred (1929). When Jordan controlled part of Jerusalem (1948 to 1967), Jewish graves were desecrated in the ancient Jewish cemetery on the Mount of Olives, and Jews were kept away from the Jewish holy places and from Jewish archeological sites, not only the Western Wall but the Tomb of Simon the Just, a focus of Jewish Jerusalem.

Jewish real estate near this tomb during Jordanian rule. Ashrawi and company seem to want 10 continue the process of dejudaization that was interrupted in 1967. Further, the calls by PLO supporters to divide Jerusalem are hypocritical. Can anyone imagine Arabs or Moslems agreeing to divide a city where they are a majority? In the days of Moslem imperial power, Moslems had no compunction about ruling as a minority over a non-Moslem majority. Consider Jerusalem under Ottoman rule. When the sultan set up a municipality n the 1870s, the mayors appointed were never Jews

despite the Jewish majority. ELLIOTT A. GREEN

WISE BASIC APPROACH

Sir, - It is time to put to rest once and for all the idea that Yitzhak Rabin and Shimon Peres "lied" to the voters because the Oslo Accords were not embodied in Labor's 1992 platform, as Jay Shapiro claims in his Letter to the Editor of February Leadership sometimes means forging ahead of what the electorate is supposedly ready for, a fact which has been forgotten in our era of politicians cutting their policies to suit the opinion polls. The fact that the present government, which was supposed to be ferociously right wing, has meekly faller in line with Rabin and Peres's basic approach only proves its wisdom and inescapability. This naturally displeases those who think like Shapiro. But they should think twice before mounting another campaign of character assassination culminating in real assassination, because they will find that not just 90 percent of the Knesset but 90 percent of the public is against them.

can easily be mobilized in favor of construction within the municipal area of their capital.

The government needs to show it is undeterred in the face of Palestinian threats. More than that, it must declare that violence organized by the Palestinian Authority is simply unacceptable after Oslo. Har Homa could become a turning point, in Israeli-Palestinian relations by projecting Israeli determination and reversing the trend of Palestinian gains without much reciprocity. If building goes ahead without significant opposition, it will be a clear victory for Israel in Jerusalem.

But if Israel's warnings go unheeded and the building at Har Homa elicits a violent response similar to what happened in September 1996, when Palestinian security forces shot at Israeli soldiers - then it will become an opportunity for a strong military riposte, regaining deterrence and teaching the Palestinians about Israeli red lines it could be costly hen Edvard Radzinsky was grow-ing np in the Soviet Union after World War II, Josef Edvard Stalin was a remote, god-like figure. But his playwright father used to tell him that one day he would write a book about the mysterious "Boss."

Now, more than 40 years after the Soviet dictator died alone in a pool of his own urine as his terrified aides awaited his orders. Russia's most popular historian has fulfilled his father's prediction.

Granted rare access to the President's Archive and other closely guarded documents. Radzinsky spent years researching his book. Stalin, which is already available in English and many other languages and will shortly come out in Russian.

"I specifically did not want to divide the country over Stalin who still evokes powerful emotions here - hut to build up a careful and balanced pieture of him," Radzinsky said.

Like many Russians, Radzińsky is still fascinated hy the man who sent untold millions to their graves or to concentration earnps while turning a hackward rural land into a nuclear-armed superpower at the center of an expanding commu-nist empire. Soldiers marched into battle with his name on their lips and prisoners in the vast Gulag he created wept when he died. Astute ohservers ranging from British wartime leader Winston Churchill - who spoke of an almost extraterrestrial force lifting people to their feet when Stalin entered a room - to Russian novelist Boris Pasternak felt the power of his

Yet just a few years after his death, Stalin was denounced by his own comrades as a cruel monster who had betrayed the ideals of the Russian Revolution.

"I wanted to find out what motivated Stalin, why he did what he did and why he created a country like the Soviet Union," said Radzinsky, who is also a successful playwright. He rejects claims, still popular in some Western leftist circles, that Stalin was paranoid and that he subverted the revolutionary legacy of Soviet state founder Vladimir Lenin. "He was too clever, too sly, too adequate to be mentally sick. He had the psychology of an oriental despot," he says. .

dent of Lenin among all the Bolshevik leaders. He understood best how to seize and to keep power," he added. Quoting the diary of Maria Svanidze, sister-in-law of Stalin's first wife Ekaterina, he said "the Russian people need a tsar." Until now, Radzinsky has been best known in Russia and ahroad for The Last Tsar, a dramatic account of the fall of the Romanov dynasty and the Bolsheviks' murder of Nicholas Il and his family. A play based on the book is now showing in Moscow. Ironically, Stalin triumphed hy setting up an autoeratic regime beyond the wildest dreams of Nicholas and his fore-in his final years, Stalin was a lonely, unhappy man. The truth was that he had had most of his friends shot.

Radzinsky also painstakingly chronicles the story of Stalin, the man - his Georgian child-hood, his wives and friends, his hlack sense of humor, his love of nocturnal drinking parties.

WHEN STALIN already had the vast country in his iron grip, in 1935, the former seminarist visited his pious peasant mother in Tbilisi, who asked him what he was doing in distant Moscow. Stalin said: "Do you remember the tsar? Well I am a hit like that." Unimpressed, his mother retorted: "You would have done better to have become a priest."

In his final years, supreme at home and ahroad, Stalin was a lonely, unhappy man, "He would complain that he was surrounded hy great men but there was nobody to sit down with for a cup of tea." The truth was that he had had most of his friends shot. Perhaps the most controversial elaim made in Radzinsky's book is that Stalin was already drawing up plans to trigger a third world war just hefore his death on March 1, 1953. Citing Czech archival evidence, Radzinsky said Stalin wanted to strike against the West while the communist hice, fresh from tri-nmphs in China and North Korea, held what he regarded as a temporary advantage. Radzinsky says the deportation of the Soviet Union's Jewish population to Siheria was intended to spark a conflict with the United States.

When Radzinsky began writing his book, in 1991, he said people laughed at him. "Who wants to hear about Stalin now, they would ask me as the Soviet Union collapsed about our ears." Radzinsky, with his dramatist's sense of timing, replied: "By the time I finish the book, Stalin will be back [in fashion]."

Stalin's image is now a familiar part of the regular demonstrations and railies held by Russians who have lost out during the country's move to democracy and a market econo-

Stalin's sympathizers - a mot-ley crew of communists, nationalists, and even monarchists and devout Orthodox believers have indirectly helped push the Russian government to adopt a more conservative stance on many issues. He said that many Russians, even within the liberal intelligentsia, felt nostalgic for the material security and sense of purpose of Stalin's time.

Radzinsky's next project is a book ahout Grigory Raspuun, the mysterious monk who wielded great influence at the Russian revolution.

As Russia prepares to mark the 80th anniversary of the tsar's abdication and the communist revolution, Radzinsky said he had noted cerie parallels between past and present during Romanov court on the eve of the his research for the Rasputin he was more cautious. "In 1917

PARENTING

Power Wheels or power play?

ur son wants Power Wheels - a battery-operated car to drive in - for his third birthday. It costs about NIS 5,000. We want to get him what he wants, but we don't want to spoil him. Is there any educational value to buying this toy? Is buying this spoiling him? Money is not an

Karen Goldberg, MSW. certified psychotherapist and family thera-pist, in private practice in Maccabim and Ramle, replies:

Money may not be an issue as far as spending it, but it would be worth your while to ask yourselves what message you will be giving your child if you buy him such an expensive toy. That he can get whatever he wants? That there are no limits?

Several issues need to be raised here. At what stage of development is your three-year-old? In other areas of your (and his) life, does he get everything he asks for? Does he know the word "no"? How are you helping him learn limits and how doyou, as parents, deal with limit-seting? Is your three-year-old testing

At this stage of development a child normally spends much of his time testing his parents. Has be experienced and have you passed the "terrible twos," the period of temper entrums - throwing himself on the floor in a rage in the middle of the around them based on what you, as local mail or screaming in a restaurant? Some children "fmish" by age three but many do not. Even though a child cannot admit it, he is looking for limits. He needs to hear the word "no." He needs to learn what your

This is the time for you to begin to instill in your child such values as where you want to spend your money, what is important to you, what is not acceptable and why. Does spending a lot of money on your child make you a better parent? Saying "no" does not make you a bad parent. In fact, if you believe in what you are saying, you will convey this clearly to your child.

He will understand what you are saying, even if not at this very

Ask yourself why your child is asking for this toy. Because he saw it on TV or in a store and because it looks like fum? Well, why not! It probably is lots of fun. But there are other ways to have fun. There are other ways for you to show your love for your child. Shortly after you leave the store, or when the ad on TV finishes, your child will probably book up to the next "fun item."

As an adult, you want many things you cannot have or will not buy for yourself. Why not convey those same limits to your child? Children learn their beliefs about the world parents, have conveyed to them, including: "My parents love me whether or not they spend lots of money on me"; or, "My parents have always spent lots of money on me - that's their way of showing me they love me, they don't have time for

How do you want your children to think about you? In their early years, children are given the foundation for later personality traits - being an allout spender, being thrifty, being stingy, buying on impulse, saving for something special and meaningful, "keeping up with the Cohens," buying "just because I like it," spending money in proportion to the specialness of the occasion, etc.

And, if you buy the Power Wheels, how long before the special effects wear off? For the first few days or weeks he will ride it all the time and may have trouble sharing it. Then, the uniqueness wears off and he becomes interested again in his other toys or in the next "hot" item on TV or in the store. Do you then buy him that as well?

Be clear in your thinking and you will be clear in the message you give to your child. Many happy hirthdays have been spent with cake, ice cream, friends and less expensive gifts that are cherished just as much by the chil-

UK to privatize London Underground

Transport Secretary Sir George Young confirmed yesterday that the Conservative government will privatize London's underground railway network if it wins Britain's coming election. Young told parliament the government would publish a policy white paper in the summer setting out the details of its sell-off

The minister said that, for the first time in a privatization, proceeds of the sell-off will be recycled into investment, ensuring that the modernization of the underground's infrastructure is completed as soon as possible.

Buyers of the "tube" will be contractually committed to modemize the system, with a guaranteed level of support from the government to supplement the private investment.

The overall aim would be to have eliminated London Underground's investment backlog within five years of privatization, he said.

Fares will be capped for the first time, with average fare increases pegged to the level of inflation for the first four years

Nice Systems Ltd. yesterday reported a 1996 net income of $5.2m. compared to $318,000 in 1995. Annual revenues were up 90% to $39.8m. compared to $21 m. in 1995.

For the fourth quarter, the Tel Aviv maker of telephony management products reported almost fourfold growth in oet income to $1.9m. compared to $481,000 in the corresponding period one year ago.

Revenues for the quarter jumped 87% to $11.6m. against $6.2m. in the same period in 1995.

Company Chairman David Arzi said the quarterly results continue the trend set in the first three quarters of the year, adding that the comexpects to further penetrate the international marke

Industrial growth slowed to 5.5% in '96

By DAVID HARRIS

Industrial production (excluding diamonds) grew by 5.5 percent in 1996, a sharp drop in comparison to the $5% growth rate registered in 1995, the Central Bureau of Statistics announced yesterday.

Growth averaged a monthly 0.4% in the first quarter, 0.2% in the second and third, with 0.3% between October and December. Growth in exports also rose 5.5% in 1996, according to government figures.

Of the various sectors, the highest growth rate was registered in the electronic communications equipment industry at 18% (50% of which was export-related), electronic components manufacture saw a 15% rise (75% from exports), jewelry and similar laxury items increased 17% (45% from exports), and growth in the chemicals industry totalled 11%.

There was no change in the growth rate in the food and drinks sector. Growth slowed in the shoe and leather industry, where it was 9% below the rate it set last year. The textiles and clothing industries set growth that dipped 4% below last year's growth.

Meanwhile, the number of people directly employed in industry increased 1.5% during 1996 by some 5,000.

These figures were published 24 hours after the Central Burean of Statistics confirmed fears of increasing unemployment. The ranks of the jobless rose to 7.3% of the workforce in the last quarter of 1996.

Three major reasons explain the slowdown in industrial-production growth, according to Hebrew University economist Professor Ephraim Kleiman - the amount of goods exported, the after-effects of immigration, and.

With the signing of agreements with the PA and Jordan there was an immediate sense of cuphoria, which resulted in an increase in foreign trade and also created greater demand at home. However, the euphoria is now wearing off and it is difficult to repeat the same year-on-year growth levels, Kleiman said. During the initial stages of absorption, many of the immigrants in the most recent wave of aliya, who now comprise more than 15% of the total population, spent money on oew bomes, famishings; motor vehicles and other items. This led to an immediate increase in demand, which was met by increased pro-

exec resigns

By GALIT LIPKIS BECK

The highest monthly salary earner in the public sector, attorney Michael Zelmer, resigned as general manager of Kannit, the state-owned road-accident victims compensation fund, the Treasury said yesterday.

Zelmer's resignation comes on the heels of public pressure after the executive found himself at the center of tax-evasion allegations.

Zeitner, who managed Karnit for more than 21 years, was recently arrested by the Income Tax Authority on suspicion of concealing income of more than NIS 1 million from 1988

In a letter to Treasury Director-General David Brodet, who is also chairman of Kamit, Zehner said he was forced to resign his NIS 67,359 a month post because of the income tax investigation and press attacks on him. Zeltner said recent develop-ments are likely to hinder his ability to serve as manager of Karnit.

"In spite of the fact that what is being discussed is at the investigation stage and despate the fact that it has nothing to do with my position as general manager of Kamit, it seems to me that it will be a good move to resign as general manager of the fund and the board of management," said

Zeltner could not be reached for comment. A Treasury spokesman confirmed the resignation.

Two weeks ago, Zelmer was arrested on suspicion of tax evasion.

Zelmer was released on NIS 1.8m. bail and a stay of exit order for 180 days was issued against him.

According to tax authority investigators, Zeltner supplied advisory services to some of the country's leading companies, institutions and businessmen dealing in compensation to road-accident victims. He failed to report the income in his annual income-tax. returns in the years 1988 to 1995.

Zeltner's jobs in addition to Karnit include the Avner insurance company, where he is legal adviser on injuries and damages from road accicompanies traded on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange and as a public director in other bodies.

Zeltner also is charged with not reporting hundreds of thousands of shekels be carned renting out apartments and houses between 1990 and 1995. He also is suspected of falsifying documents so he could get a tax

No end in sight for oil slump

By RICHARD MABLY

LONDON (Reuter) - Oil's sudden bellyflop could see crude prices sink still further in the coming weeks before rising spring gasoline demand in the United States comes to the rescue, traders and analysts said yesterday.

Oil producer celebrations in the wake of the sustained bull run which took crude to a six-year high in late October have turned sour in the space of a six-week, 22 percent slide in the value of crude. International benchmark North Sea Brent yesterday stood at $19.30 a barrel, down $5.50 since early January. Traders blame a combination of rising Iraqi oil sales and a mild oorthem hemisphere winter for oil's sharp swallow dive. "We've had a short, mild winter and a reduction in crude demand because of refinery maintenance combined with an increase in supply from Iraq." said Russell Hill, senior crude trader at OMV.

"For the first time in a long time the market is in surplus. I think there's about a 30% possibility of $18 within a matter of weeks."

"Our feeling is that by about the end of March the market could well be looking at $17," said an analyst with London's Natwest Securities. "We think the market will come off significantly over the next few weeks, but that could prove to be its low point for the year." Dealers said falling prices were forcing Iraq to export more to meet a cash target permitted under the United Nations oil-for-food exchange which started in December Iraq is allowed to export a billion dollars' worth of crude by March 9, followed by a second billion by early June when the deal comes up for review at the UN.

The effect is to destabilize the

The more Iraq sells the more the price falls and the more Iraq must sell to hit its target." "We expect continuous pressure on oil prices in spite of the already steep decline," said Salomon Brothers in a report. Iraqi crude now is fetching less than $18 a barrel in Europe compared to $23 when Baghdad moved its first exports under the deal in mid-December. Analysts' back-of-the-envelope calculations suggest Iraqi exports would need to run at up to 800,000 bod over the next week and a half to reach the interim cash target. Iraq's exports in January ran at about 500,000 bpd. "It's hard to find reasons to buy and under those circumstances it looks like a one-way trip. It's just a question of how far and how fast," said analyst Geoff Pyne at finance house UBS.

Oil equity analysts say crude's weakness will put further pressure on oil company shares, already down sharply versus other sectors since early February.

Further ahead, however, oil prices could stage a significant recovery, buoyed by rising demand, especially for gasoline in the United States, the analysts said.

US boosts Eurobourses

LONDON (Reuter) - UK shares fell short of a record high yesterday but still managed solid gains as investors continued to bope that the market's appetite for equities had not yet been satisfied. A sluggish start on Wall Street and market nerves ahead of Federal Reserve chief Alan Greenspan's testimony before the US Congress today, prevented a record close, leaving the FTSE 100 index of leading stocks up 13.6 points to 4,344.7.

FRANKFURT - German shares surged ahead over a lively bourse session yesterday, propelled by ovemight Wall Street gains. The 30-share DAX iodex ended up 49 points, or 1.54%, at 3.223.21 points, while the IBIS DAX index was also stronger in early afternoon trade, up 49 points at 3,235.36 points.

PARIS - French shares closed sharply higher yesterday with a 1.55% gain es the blue-chip index moved back toto 2,600 territory, fuelled by a Mooday gaio on Wall Street and a solid dollar. The bluechip CAC-40 index closed was up 39.87 points or 1.55% at

Magic No. is 22 as Israel faces Belarus

By ARYEH DEAN COHEN

The magic number for Israel's national basketball team tonight as it faces host Belarus is 22, the margin hy which coach Zvi Scherf's club won when the two clubs first met. As long as Israel wins, or loses by 22 or less, it qualifies for this summer's European championships in Spain.

While that may seem an easy task, the Belarus players have not completely given up on their chances to make the trip to Spain, so Scherf & Co. are likely to have a tough battle on their hands.

Former Maccabi Tel Aviv star and current Hapoel Jerusalem player Motti Daniel has announced he'll be quitting the national team after a 149-game run as a member of the squad. Daniel will surely be missed, but hopefully will want to go out in style versus

Scherf has added red-hot Lior Arditi of Bnei

Herzliya to the roster, which should also help. Arditi is a fine defender and can also put the ball in the basket, and is expected to take up some of the slack of missing team captain Doron Jamchee, who is out with an injury.

Adi Gordon is expected to carry a large part of the offense, and judging by his recent form in European play, he should be primed for another big game.

For Belarus, several key players will be missing. Star Valery Denenko has taken out Russian citizenship and will be unavailable, and several key Belarus players are currently playing on US college

However, Ruslan Boidakov from Dynamo Moscow and Igor Griszuk from Polisb club Nobils will reportedly be hack on the Belarus club after missing their team's loss to Georgia.

The game will be broadcast live on Channel 1

Jordan leads Bulls past Portland

CHICAGO (AP) - Michael Jordan scored 30 of his 37 points in the first half Monday night as the Chicago Bulls extended their winning streak to seven games with a 116-89 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

Scottie Pippen added 22 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds for the Bulls, who are 49-6 overall and 26-1 at the United Center. They have won 19 consecutive home games. The Trail Blazers were without second-leading scorer J.R. Rider, who missed the game due to the death of his cousin. In addition, Rasbeed Wallace didn't start because he was late for Portland's morning shootaround. Gary Trent led the Blazers with 14 points.

Magic 93, Pistons 84 Penny Hardaway scored 29 points and host Orlando remained unbeaten under interim coach Richie Adubato by ending Detroit's six-game winning streak. The Magic improved to 4-0 since Adubato replaced Brian Hill, who was fired last week. Hardaway atoned for a poor performance in a road loss at Detroit on February 12 by going 11-for-16 from the field, including 4-of-6 from behind the 3-point arc. Rony Seikaly was the only other player in double figures for Orlando, finishing with 19 points and eight rebounds. Theo Ratliff led Detroit with 17 points. Grant Hill, who had a triple double with 31 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists the last time the teams played, struggled with 14 points, eight rebounds and six assists this time.

Hawks 106, Warriors 100 Christian Laettner scored 25 points and Mookie Blaylock just missed a triple-double as Atlanta won at home.

Blaylock finished with 18 points, nine rebounds and eight assists as the Hawks won for the 23rd time in 25 home games. Laettner hit a jumper to give the Hawks a 98-96 lead with 2:30 left. Then Blaylock took over, scoring four points and making two steals for the Hawks down the stretch. Hornets 96, Spurs 84 Glen Rice scored 33 points as visiting Charlotte extended its winning streak to five games. Anthony Mason added 24 points and 16 rebounds for Charlotte, and Vlade Divac had 13 rebounds

Du Plessis new Springbok coach

JOHANNESBURG (AP) -Former Springbok wing Carel du Plessis was named coach of the South African national rugby team

Du Plessis succeeds Andre Markgraaff, who resigned last week after public disclosure of a taped telephone conversation in which be made racist remarks. Markgraaff's resignation was

South African rughy after the ---Springboks won the Rugby World By announcing Markgraaff's successor so quickly, and choosing a popular former Springbok such as du Plessis, the South African Rugby Football Union hoped to ease any lingering concern over the controversy and avoid more disruption in preparing for the upcoming season.

Du Plessis was Springbok team tactician on last year's tour to Argentina, France and Wales, said SARFU chief executive officer the latest in a series of shocks for Riaan Oberholzer.

"Carel is a great leader and a visionary and he possesses a shrewd rugby mind," Oberholzer said in making the announcement. "We are confident that he can knit the different strands of Springbok rugby together and come up with a winning combination." While Markgraaff was both coach and manager of the Springboks, du Plessis would only fill the coaching role and a new manager will be named later.

Under Markgraaff, who succeeded World Cup coach Kitch Christie, South Africa lost four straight Tests to New Zealand.

Markgraaff then cnt popularcaptain Francois Pienaar from the side and led the Springhoks on the unbeaten tour of Argentina, France and Wales.

Israel coach Shlomo Scharf said in an interview on Germany's ARD television that the Holocaust is a thing of the past and that the match between his charges and the Germans should not take on the historic significance which everybody is trying to pin on it. "What's past is past," Scharf said in German.

The following day be was berated here for his comments, and apologized for that statement in the Israeli media. "What I meant to say was that we are playing against a new generation, and our relations with Germany are excellent. I don't need to be taught a lesson about the Holocaust, I lost a great number of relatives at the hands of the Nazis," he continued.

The cool European-style weather currently sweeping the country is reflected in the lack of local enthusiasm for the national soccer team's clash with Germany today. While nobody in the home camp feels that the depleted Israeli side has any chance of overcoming the strong

Germans, from an historic viewpoint too, this match is not taking on the emotional rivalries that might be expected, considering the traumatic past which the two nations represent.

One of the veteran Israelis expected to open in the match, Eli Ohana, also downplayed the match's potential significance. "Of course the -past should not be forgotten, but we are TileW generation, many of our clubs train in Germany, we drive German cars and we use German-made appliances in our homes. The German's are a major force in world soccer and we will try to give them a good fight," Ohana was quoted in the local Hebrew press as having told ARD.

over 100 media personnel, traveled to Jerusalem to visit Yad Vasbern, the Western Wall and the Knesset. "It was a very moving visit," German captain Juergen Klinsmann said of the visit to Yad Vashem. "We must make sure to pass on what happened during the. Holocaust to the next generations in Germany so that such a thing never, ever happens again."

Scharf has his work cut out for the match. Israel will be without several key players, including creative midfielders Eyal Berkowitz and Haim Revivo, who failed to secure releases from Southampton and Spain's Celta Vigo respectively. Also missing is the injured Tal Banin of Hapoel Haifa, a battler in midfield who is generally seen as Israel's inspiration through his committed play and strong tackling.

Israel set for clash vs. German

Of the players available to Scharf, Ronnie Rosenthal of Tottenham is seen as the man to cause panic in the German defense through his powerful runs. Ohana is the experienced striker whose coolness in front of the goal may prove decisive if Israel manages to create goalscoring situations. But Israel's brittle defense will be a far more worrying prospect

Israel Under 21's in 1-1 draw for Scharf. He has assigned Maccabi Tel Aviv's Klinsmann and Arik Bennado of Maccabi Haifa will keep a close eye on Fredi Bobic. Rosenthal will mark Germany's playmaker, Matthias Sammer.

It is very important that we don't fall apart," Scharf said yesterday.

A last-mirate injury has come between South African-born striker Scan Dundee and his chance to make his debut for the national side only a few weeks after gaining a German passport.

Dundee, who was naturalized under a fasttrack procedure reserved for cases of "public interest," is the German first division's most prolific goalscorer this season with 14 goals from 19 games for Karlsruhe.

This is the biggest disappointment of my career," said the 24-year-old after learning that bruising in his right calf would keep bim out of the match. Trainer Berti Vogts made it clear, bowever, that he did not consider the injury a major setback.

Dundee's absence means VFB Stuttgart's striker Fredi Bobic will resume his European championship partnership with Klinsmann.
Vogts plans to try a more attacking formation than of late, with three offensive midfielders playing behind the striking pair.

The absence of Thomas Haessler, recovering from injury, and Mehmet Scholl, with a torn calf muscle, means a debut for terrier-like former East German midfielder Darinsz Wosz. Wosz, 27, has seven pre-1990 caps for East Germany. But he only forced his way into the reckoning for Vogts's pan-German squad this season with commanding performances which have propelled Bochum into the upper reaches of the first division, Supporting the strikers along with Wosz will almost certainly be playmaker Andy Moeller and Bayern Munich's mercurial Mario Basler, more often a substitute than a regular first choice regular for Vogts.

Vogts will use the friendly to give a run-out to second-choice goalkeeper Oliver Kahn, increasingly frustrated at his role as permanent understudy to Andreas Koepke.

Germany's probable line-up: Goalkeeper Oliver Kahn (Bayern Munich) Defense -Matthias Sammer (Borussia Dortmund), Juergen Kohler (Borussia Dortmund), Thomas Strunz (Bayern Munich) Midfield - Dieter Eilts (Werder Bremen), Christian Ziege Munich), Andreas Moeller (Borussia Dortmund), Dariusz Wosz (Bochum) Attack -Juergen Klinsmann (Bayern Munich), Fredi Bobic (VFB Stuttgart)

Israel's probable lineup: Goalkeeper -Rafi Cohen (Hapoel Haifa) Defense - Felix Halfon (Hapoel Tel Aviv), Gadi Brumer (Maccabi Tel Aviv), Amir Shelah (Maccabi Tel Aviv), Arik Bennado (Maccabi Haifa), David Amsalem (Betar Jerusalem) Midfield - Ran Ben-Shimon (Hapoel Haifa), İtzik Zohar (Betar Jerusalem), Avi Nimni (Maccabi Tel Aviv), Ronnie Rosenthal (Tottrenham Hotspur) Attack - Eli Ohana (Betar Jerusalem, captain)

Maccabi World Union Bowe booted out of changes with the times

By HEATHER CHAIT

The athletes may resemble their predecessors, with a bit more brawn and Reebok labels, but the aims of the Maccabi World Union have not The dream of producing a muscular Jew after 2,000 years of depicting the Jew as the poor, pious scholar, has moved into its next phase," says Ronald Bakalarz, President of Maccabi World Union. Bakalarz, a prolific businessman from Colombia, was in Israel to lead the Maccabi World Union congress, putting the final touches to plans for the 15th Maccabiah to be held from July 14-24. The Maccabi movement, according to Bakalarz, is healthy, thriving and numbers 400,000 members across the globe, making it one of the largest Jewish organizations.

Behind its success has been the breaking-down of barriers and redefin-ing the philosophy that once was Maccabi. "Maccabi today is for each country what it needs" says Bakalarz. The original aim of promoting Jewish sportspeople, showing Jews as engaging in enjoyable activities also, has been modified in response to the issue of assimilation," says Bakalarz, as his smiling eyes take on a somber light behind his glasses. "If we maintained our policy of having only top athletes in Maccabi, we would be alienating other less sports-minded Jews. So we opened our doors. Maccabi now offers social and cultural activities, with the idea of promoting Jewish continuity, not just excellence in sport." In Latin America, Bakalarz's domain, Maccabi now offers theater, folk dancing and an atmosphere where a kid can just hang out with other

Jews at the club restaurant. "Our change of philosophy opens new possibilities for children to learn about Zionism."

The fruits have followed; Latin America's Maccabi movement now spans the ages of 3-100. We are now selling our new image and idea of Jewish continuity. Maccabi is no longer a purely sports organization, but has divisions all over the world and is devoted to encouraging Zionism," explains

Shearer sidelined after operation

NEWCASTLE (Reoter) - The world's costliest player Alan Shearer had his third groin operation in nine mooths yesterday and will miss Newcastle's UEFA Cup quarter-final tie against Monaco next week.

Courtney said it was impossible to say when the England striker would play again although his two previous similar operations each kept him out for around a month.

Shearer is the League's top Club spokesman Graham scorer this season with 20 goals.

Marines, says Corps

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former heavyweight boxing champion Riddick Bowe didn't leave the Marines voluntarily, he was booted out of boot camp because he "refused to train," The Washington Post reported yesterday.

Marine Corps spokesman Maj. Rick Long in Parris Island, SC, said, "there were a lot of occasions when he was told to do somethingand he just said, 'No, I'm not going to do it." Long told the Post he wanted to clarify reports that he said gave the impression that Bowe was allowed to leave the Marines last week after realizing that he had made a mistake by joining. You don't sign a contract with the United States Marine Corps, come in here, start training, and then say, 'Oops, I think I want to go home' and theo just leave," Long said.

It's not that easy." Bowe bowed out Friday, telling his drill instructor and battalion commander that the regimen was too strict, that he missed his family, that he wished he'd enlisted when he was vounger.

At that time, Long was quoted as saying in describing the feelings of others at the camp, "The overall sentiment was one of respect for trying. From the Marines I talked to they said he at least gave it a shot That's more than you can say for some." But Long was quoted in the Post as saying it became obvious that the 29-year-old multimillionaire was "a problem"recruit during his initial five days after processing; and that his behavior became worse last week when he refused to train.

It's just obstinacy, that's all,"

Australia on hot streak

Long said.

SOWETO (Reuter) - Australia, fired hy an incisive new ball burst from Andrew Bichel and Jason Gillespie, completed its buildup to the first Test against South Africa with a fifth straight win yesterday.

The touring team cruised to a 79-run victory against a Transvaal Invitation XI at the Elkah Stadium, scoring 261 for seven in its 45 overs and dismissing the local side for 182 with three overs

The game was over by the 10th over-of Transvaai's reply when wicketkeeper Nic Pothas was caught off Bichel without scoring, reducing his side to 29 for five. Gillespie picked up two wickets but it was Bichel who did the real damage, removing Test player Adam Bacher for three.

SCOREBOARD Monday's NHL results Boston 3, Washington 3; Detroit 5, Phoenix 3.

Byker Grove is an extremely successful British drama series for adolescents, produced for Children's BBC and which won an 87% viewer rating in Britain this year. Channel 1 has purchased 90 episodes and will begin screening them this afternoon, at 4:25.

Set at Byker Grove Youth Center, the show focuses on the kinds of things that trouble adolescents around the world, like love, friendship and family problems. The center is attended by members aged 12 to 16 and is run by Geoff Keegan, who rules with enlightened indulgence. The episodes tackle contemporary issues which affect the lives of the youngsters and adults frequenting the center, for example, drug abuse, homosexuality, religious cults, disabilities and single mothers.

Weizman given royal welcome

LONDON - The gusts of wind that swirled around Horse Guards Parade in central London yesterday appeared to sweep away a half-century of Anglo-Israel acri-mony as President Ezer Weizman was welcomed by Queen Elizabeth on the first day of the first state visit to Britain by an Israeli president.

Amid a 21-gun salute, the sun burst out of the steel-gray sky as the Israeli flag was raised alongside the Royal Standard at the parade ground at Whitehall, and the band of the First Battalion Scots Guards played Hatikva.

Then the queen introduced Weizman and his wife, Reuma, to others on the royal dais, including her husband, Prince Philip, the heads of the armed services and the police, Prime Minister John Major and two of his most senior ministers. Home Secretary Michael Howard and Foreign Secretary Malcolm Rifkind, both of whom are Jewish.

But the highlight came toward the end of the ceremony when Scots Guards Commander Major Alastair Mathewson marched up to Weizman and formally invited him, in flawless Hebrew, to inspect the guard of hooor. Evidently surprised by the Hebrew, Weizman responded with a resounding "Toda raba!" With the pomp and ceremony

Rolls Royces that had brought the parties to Horse Guards Parade drove away and a fleet of horse-drawn landaus appeared to carry the royal family and their guests down the mile-long Mall, festooned with Israeli and British flags, to Buckingham Palace.

After a state lunch, Weizman visited Westminster Abbey, land was formally welcomed by Lord Mayor of Westminster Robert Davis at St. James's Palace, visited the queen mother as Clarence House and last night attended a state banquet in his honor giveo by the queen.

The festive mood was reflected in the London Times, which yesterday carried an editorial enotled "Natural Allies."

It declared that Weizman's visit was as welcome as it was overdue and it noted that it had come "at a time when relations are at

Agreement reported on Shoah compensation fund

By MARILYN HENRY

BERN, SWITZERLAND -After two days of meetings, officials of the World Jewish Congress, the gypsy community and the Swiss Foreign Ministry were believed to have reached a draft agreement on a structure for a Holocaust compensation fund. The details, however, were shrouded in secrecy.

A day earlier, a WJC official,

Maram Stem, had given the impression that a dramatic announcement on the fund was imminent.

Swiss officials, bowever, refused to divulge details yesterday. WJC officials left Bern directly after the meetings and did not meet with reporters.

The draft agreement was being discussed late yesterday by the Swiss Federal Council, and oo further meetings with Jewish officials had been scheduled, said Rolf Bloch, head of the Swiss Jewish

The fund, which will be run by a "foundation," was started with an initial contribution of SFr100 million from the three major Swiss hanks, who then turned the responsibility for the fund over to the Swiss government. An association representing Swiss businesses also has pledged to contribute.

uoder Swiss law," Bloch told reporters yesterday.

The Swiss government "had to give their blessing in their way," he said at the Swiss Federal Archives, where historians conducted a day-long seminar reviewing the current research on looted property and dormant assets.
